Sheriff Abbott Brought Reavis to Fine Contribution is Received From Beautiful Floral Offerings Attested Salt Lake to Keep Him Away From Haworth-Effort for Change of Venue for Layton Murderer's Trial-Prejudice Alleged.

(Special to The Herald.)

Farmington, May 23.-Sheriff L. E. to, bringing with him L. U. Reavis, the horse trader who was arrested at Redding, Cal., last Saturday morning, on Abbott, after many months of continvery clever piece of detective work, ability as an officer of the law.

Good Detective Work.

H. E. Grant, an acquaintance of Reavis and of Haworth, has done good work in running down the alleged perwork in Tulning down the angel in the Albert at Redding when the arrest was made by a California Miners at That City Give Part of

From Redding to Sacramento, miles, Sherin Abbott was alone with his prisoner, and he arrived at the state capital too late to have requisition papers honored Saturday night. For this reason he was compelled to lay over until Monday evening, when he #gain started homeward.

Reivis was very cool when he was arrested. He told the officers that he had been expecting something of the ting under guard in the court house, he talked freely of life in California, the recent senatorial contest in that state, of mining, lumbering, etc., on al of which topics he conversed intelligently and pleasantly.

Prisoner is Not Uneasy.

If Reavis is in the least alarmed about his predicament his demeanor does not betray his feelings. On the question of the arime with which he is charged he said that he knew nothing He admitted knowing Haworth, whom he claims to have met in Boise last summmer, and again at Baker City, Ore., in the fall. He claims not to have been with Haworth between those points, having been delayed, he says, by the illness of his wife. Since the camp was at Baker City, Reavis claims to have not seen Haworth. This, it may be said, agrees with what Sheriff Abbott found out while in Oregon.

A peculiar part of Reavis' story is that he saw in the papers that he was wanted, and that he had concluded at once to write and inform the officers that he would come to Utah when been so hard to locate makes his story seem improbable.

Reavis was in Farmington only an for safekeeping and to keep him from municating with Haworth, which could not be prevented were the two to be kept in jail here. County Attorney Streeper said today that the time for the arraignment had not been fixed, and that it may not be for several days, owing to a rush of work preparing for Haworth's trial.

Change of Venue For Waworth. The county attorney was served with papers yesterday notifying him that a change of yenue for Haworth would be asked for, on account of prejudice against the prisoner in Davis county. Twenty-three affidavits have been secounty, and some from outside, stating that prejudice does exist. These will be offset by fifty or more affidavits from leading Davis county people asserting that the sentiment here is not such as to prevent Haworth from receiving justice.

REAVIS SAYS HE IS INNOCENT. Accused Accomplice of Haworth Tells What Little He Knows.

in the Salt Lake county jail to awai trial on the charge of having been impilcated with Nick Haworth in the murder of Nightwatchman Sandall in the Layton store in March, 1899, looks anything but like a man who would take another's life. He has a good command of language and his looks and manners would not indicate that he belongs to the criminal class.

"What have I to say to the public?" said Reavis yesterday to a Herald reporter who put the question that can'e back in the form of an answer. "Well, continued the prisoner, "God knows I am not guilty. I never saw Sandall, and until coming down on the train this morning I did not know in which store the nightwatchman had been nurdered. At the time of the killing was in Ogden and had not been to Layton for nearly a month. This I can prove if I have half a chance to get my witnesses, but I am a poor man and will have to trust to the court to appoint a good attorney to properly represent my defense. Still I believe justice will be given me, for I am not one of those who believe that through perjured testimony."

In response to further questioning, Reavis said he had been expecting to arrested ever since reading in San Francisco papers that he was suspected of complicity in the crime.
"But my conscience was clear," remarked the prisoner, "and I continued to live in Redding with my wife and three little children and went on about my business there without changing and said that she contemplated a pleasant stay in the islands.

Reavis admitted that he knew flaworth, having been associated with him in the horse business when the two had their head warters in Ogden in the winter of 1898 and 1899. The prisoner declares that he did not even go into Davis county or near Layton after about the middle of February last year.

'The officers," said Reavis, "evident-The officers, said Reavis, evidently learned that I was a friend of Haworth and just jumped at the conclusion that I had something to do with the murder. I want a speedy trial so I can go back home."

When the reporter suggested that Havorth had made a confession that he and the prisoner killed Nightwatch-man Sandall for the purpose of robbing the store at Layton, Reavis said:
"I do not believe it and I will not till

I hear the confession from Haworth's own lips. Then if he says so I will know that he is insane. I cannot be-lieve that Haworth had anything to

with this crime."
When asked as to the whereabouts of Jim Stevens, the old man who is also accused of complicity in the murBaker City last July starting for a sheep camp to go to work. He could not credit the statement that Stevens had mysteriously disappeared from the land of the living.

Esteem in Which the Dead Woman Had Been Held-All Classes of Burial of E. L. T. Harrison.

In the presence of a large assemblage, every member of which was a R. yesterday afternoon in the City cemetery. The services that had preceded the interment were beautiful and impressive. In accordance with the expressed wish of the dead woman, they were conducted at her late residence.

The large residence was filled with friends and relatives, and chairs had to be placed in the yard to accommodate the throng that wished to pay a last tribute to her memory. The concourse was not made up of any one sect or class. It was a homogeneous gathering, drawn together by the common tie of grief for one all had known and loved.

Old men and women who had known Mrs. Whitney from her childhood were There, too, were her schoolmates and her acquaintances of maturer years. Little children, to whom she had been a faithful friend and confidant, were interspersed through the throng, and on the cheeks of many were traces of tears that sprung from a deep and lasting sorrow.

In the parlor lay the flower-covered casket. If any evidence was needed of the esteem in which Mrs. Whitney had been held, it was found here. Great masses of blooms were everywhere. Their fragrance hung about the house of mourning and their fresh heavily touched the samplesones of the beauty touched the samplesones of the samplesones beauty touched the sombreness of the occasion as a shaft of sunlight in a dark place. The services were opened by the George Q. Cannon followed Dr. Tal-mage. He said he had not intended to make any remarks when he came, but felt called upon to endorse what had been said by previous speakers. In refering to the young children left by Mrs. Whitney, Mr. Cannon said that there was a Providence who watched over little motherless ones. He cited an instance in his own family, his mother having died when six of her children were quite young. All six are alive today, and all had been pe-culiarly blessed in their life work. The last speaker was Joseph F. Smith. He dwelt on the life and character of Mrs. Whitney and urged his hearers to live as blamelessly as she had lived. At the conclusion of Mr.

Smith's remarks, the quartette sang 'Not Dead, But Sleepth," and Angus M. Cannon offered the concluding When he had finished, the pallbearers, who were Reed Smoot, Owen Smoot, George Smoot, W. C. A. of the longest that has been seen in Salt Lake for some time. At the cemetery the services were very simple. They consisted only of the singing of a selection by the quartette and the dedication of the grave by Rulon S. Wells.

the members of the order in Salt Lake were out, and the ceremonies conducted by Lester Freed and Rabbi Lowenstein were very appropriate. It was the dy-ing wish of Mr. Wallach that he be buried under the auspices of the Elks, of which he had been an ardent and enthusiastic member.

The hall on Market street was decorated in every nook and corner with choice flowers given as the offering of the lodge and of the numerous friends of the deceased. Above and at the front of the casket, which lay in the front part of the room, there was an immense floral design representing the face of a clock. It was made of white flowers, while the numbers and the hands were of purple, the color of the Elks the world over. The hands pointed to 11 o'clock, a time that is symbolic in Elk ceremonial.

Lester Freed read the Elk funeral service. A solo, "The Vacant Chair," was sung in fine voice. Rabbi Lowenstein, who is a member of the lodge, People Included in Assemblage— made an address. He was eloquent in his tribute to the deceased and his description of the great order to which he belonged. At the close the whole audience standing sang the last verse of the Elk's ode.

Then the pallbearers, P. J. Conway, B. Whittemore, Frank Gardner, mourner, all that was mortal of Mrs. Adolph Jacobs, J. A. Greenewald and Zina Smoot Whitney was laid to rest. Nels Ransohoff, carried the casket down stairs, where it was placed in the hearse and taken to Evans undertaking parlors. A large procession followed the hearse. There were in line over 155 of the members of the lodge, and many persons who had been friends of Mr. Wallach.

The remains will be shipped to New York for burial this morning on the Short Line. The pallbearers will accompany them to the train at 7 o'clock. Mrs. Wallach, the mother, will take them home and they will be received by lodge No. 1 there, the first lodge of

The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful and nothing expressed better the lasting friend-
